

PEGGY GAY HAS WON HAPPINESS THROUGH THREE FAIRY UNCLES

That Is, They're Almost Fairies, for They Came Like Sprites When Needed.

Cliderea with her fairy godmother was no more fortunate than fifteen-year-old Margaret, otherwise "Peggy," Gay, late of Mount Sterling, Ky., then of Cincinnati and now of New York.

"Peggy" has no fairy godmother, but she has a coterie of volunteer "uncles"—a bond dealer, a broker and a lawyer—who found her hungry and forlorn and who are now having the time of their lives making her happy. The dark-eyed, dark-haired little Kentucky maiden is the daughter of Mrs. Estelle Cooper Gay, who says the late John C. Calhoun Mayo, Kentucky millionaire coal man, was the father of her boy and that he failed to keep a promise to provide for her and the boy in his will.

Mrs. Mayo is now in Cincinnati in an effort to find her little son, who was kidnapped, she says, from a school near there before Mayo's death last year.

Mrs. Gay and Peggy were in dire straits when the bond broker "uncle," a stranger to the girl, found her sitting disconsolately in Peacock Alley at the Waldorf. She told him she hadn't eaten for three days and that she and her mother had been put out of the Clendenen and the McAlpin Hotels, and that they were in danger of a similar calamity at the Markwell, No. 320 West Forty-ninth Street.

The bond holder "uncle" called in the lawyer and broker "uncles," got the baggage of mother and daughter released and furnished Mrs. Gay with funds to go to Cincinnati to press her claims.

Then Peggy was placed in the home of a woman friend of the three uncles, where she is now and where she will remain indefinitely while the "uncles" sit up nights trying to think of new ways to make her whole life happy.

"MOVIE" AUDIENCE WALKS FROM A FIRE

Though Frightened, Men, Women and Children Are Cool Amid Smoke.

About two hundred and fifty persons, mostly women and children, marched, frightened but quietly, out of the Crown Moving Picture Theatre at No. 115 West One Hundred and Sixty-third Street at 8:15 o'clock last night, leaving an auditorium that was bedecked with smoke. Just as they got into the street the fire engines thundered up to the theatre, but by that time the fire inside had been extinguished.

At all times it had been confined to the sheet metal, rooftop box occupied by the moving picture operator, Michael Warren of No. 121 West One Hundred and Sixty-third Street. Warren said that he was running off the film of a love story, and because of the film's age it broke. As it snapped, the lamp in the box set the celluloid ablaze.

H. B. Taft Weds His Housekeeper.

Herbert Richard Taft, sixty-five, of No. 387 Ocean Avenue, Brooklyn, a distant relative of ex-President Taft, and Miss Ida De Witt, fifty-one, were married yesterday at the office of Recorder Frederick Rogers on Sixteenth Street, West New York, N. J. Miss De Witt, it is said, was his housekeeper. Mr. Taft, who is said to be wealthy, was divorced in March, 1914. This is Mr. Taft's fourth marriage.
